Women's Arboriculture Conference

Focusing Passion, Policies, and Planning on Trees

March 5-7 | Harrison Hot Springs

2014

The Women's Arboriculture Conference is a unique sponsorship opportunity as it is an interdisciplinary forum addressing trees, their place in our world and our relationship with them. Speakers and delegates who are arborists, foresters, horticulturalists, landscape architects and designers, land planners and managers, and master gardeners are meeting with the shared purpose of discussing and problem-solving tree-related issues. At most other arboriculture conferences, women speakers are underrepresented.

Mission: The Women's Arboriculture Conference provides a venue where women speakers, expert in their fields, provide solid technical, management, and policy information, creating an interdisciplinary environment where professionals can expand their viewpoints and make lasting, productive connections.

Objectives: The Women's Arboriculture Conference is dynamic, responsive and experiential; where women and men, students and those who have completed doctorates, involved in varied tree-related professions, meet in facilities surrounded by nature, to learn, experience and share their passion for trees, recognizing and respecting the inter-connectedness and inter-dependence of trees and human beings.

Speakers and participants at the Women's Arboriculture Conference are qualified evaluators of your organization. They utilize products and services, and they also play key roles in product and service purchase decision-making processes. Conference speakers and participants have come to rely on conferences such as the Women's Arboriculture Conference for education about new and emerging market trends and products to benefit their organization and professional development.

Our conference speakers span the breadth of tree professionals

Keynote: Dr. Nalini Nadkarni, Forest Ecologist, member National Geographic Speakers Bureau

Social scientist: Dr. Kathleen Wolf

Professor (retired) & author: Susan Murray

Landscape Architect: Nancy McLean

Arborist: Sara Shores

Lawyer: Sasha Nowicki

Environmental Planner: Nancy Hofer

Registered Clinical Counselor: Katy Rose (Master's degree in Transpersonal Counselling Psychology, specialization in Wilderness Therapy)

We are in the process of confirming additional speakers.

Comments from some of the participants of the 2012 conference

"I had a fantastic time at the conference....what energy!"

"Thank-you again for organizing such an amazing event, with so many interesting and truly gifted speakers."

"I do not go to many conferences as I do not find them that useful but this one was quite different. I learnt so much last week and came away stimulated and inspired by the speakers. There was also so much practical information."

"An unusual blend of solid technical, management, and policy information but leavened with nonapologetic displays of emotion."

"I was thrilled to come away with more knowledge, inspiration and reassurance to continue moving forward in my design business. It was a great idea to open the conference to a wide spectrum of people in this industry."

The Women's Arboriculture Conference is an exciting opportunity for you to raise the profile of your organization. By displaying your commitment to progressive, responsible tree care you can build your corporate image, gain a competitive edge, and be positioned as an industry leader. This conference will enable you to obtain valuable exposure and prominence with current and potential customers and build relationships with many brilliant forward thinkers (and do-ers) in arboriculture.
